WHY SHOULD YOU CARE?

A 1998 POLLARA Study shows that every year, one out of three Canadians needs a lawyer.

Fear of legal service costs and finding quality, affordable legal advice can cause anxiety, resulting in absenteeism and reduced employee productivity. Legal situations arise unexpectedly, and timely legal advice can solve problems before they become acute and require extensive legal services. Employees who are given the tools to take control of their personal situations can more effectively control their well-being.

For a limited time, LPI is offering its premium legal assistance plan LPI LawMAX at a significant discount, an annual rate of only $60 per employee (or a 3 cent per hour raise). The rates are guaranteed for 5 years and further discounts may be available for groups over 800 lives. LPI requires 100% employee participation for these preferred rates.

- Although group legal plans have only been offered in Canada for about 10 years with varying degrees of acceptance, they are commonplace in the U.S. and Europe.
- A group legal plan can help relieve some employee anxiety as it relates to finding good, affordable legal advice.
- LPI Law NET provides employee members with unlimited, free telephone legal guidance (one call per matter), free phone calls and letters from a lawyer to a third party plus two free Powers of Attorney; and up to 60% off national average rates for other legal services.
- It should be noted that company-paid legal services are a taxable benefit to employees.
